A Woman Married to a Woman. The Syracuse Journals are playing on the human sense of the marvelous by a story of a jolly young lady, who, dressed in male attire, wooed, won and wedded another young lady; and, what is still more romantic and prodigious, the bride refuses to be separated from her female husband. Nonsense, we could tell a story worth two of that, of a couple where not only the man turned out to be a woman, but the woman also turned out to be a man.
