Biographical/Historical note

Patricia Nell Warren was born in 1936 and grew up on the Grant Kohrs cattle ranch near Deer Lodge, Montana. She has been writing professionally since she was a teenager in the 1950s, and a publishing professional since 1959. She moved to New York in 1955 to attend Manhattanville College. Warren landed a job at Reader's Digest where she worked as a copy editor, 1959-1964, and book editor, 1964-1980.

Warren married a Ukrainian emigre writer in 1960 and wrote four books of Ukrainian poetry between 1959-1973. For a few years in the 1960s, Reader's Digest stationed her in Spain. While there, she wrote her first gay novel, a chronicle of the illicit relationship between a Spanish bullfighter and a peasant during the fascist regime of Spain (she would publish the book in 2001 under the title The Wild Man). In Spain, she also took up jogging. She became proficient enough that she was the fourth woman to finish the 1970 Boston Marathon. In 1971, she published her first book The Last Centennial, a set of three short novels that take place in a Montana town during the 1970s. In 1973, Warren divorced her husband.

In 1974, Warren published her most acclaimed work The Front Runner, her first published gay-themed book. This love story about an ex-Marine track coach and his Olympic athlete was the first work of gay fiction to reach the New York Times Best Seller list and has sold an estimated 10 million copies worldwide. The work inspired Front Runners running and walking clubs across the world. The Front Runner also has drawn the interest of movie companies and people, including Paul Newman, but as of 2014, the film has yet to be made.

In 1976, Warren published The Fancy Dancer, the first bestseller to portray a gay priest and to explore gay life in a small town. In 1978, Warren published The Beauty Queen, a story inspired by the rise of the homophobic Anita Bryant. In 1991, Warren published her second mainstream title, One Is the Sun, a historical epic about a woman chief of the Montana Territory during the 1800s.

In 1994, Warren completed Harlan's Race, the sequel to The Front Runner. This was the premiere title offered by Wildcat Press, an independent press co-founded by Warren and her business partner, Tyler St. Mark. In 1997, Wildcat Press published the third book in the series, Billy's Boy, which won the Lambda Literary Editor's Choice Award. Wildcat Press would go on to publish the following Warren-authored books: The Wild Man (2001), The Lavender Locker Room: 3000 Years of Great Athletes Whose Sexual Orientation Was Different (2006), and My West: Personal Writings on the American West (2011).

Warren is also known for her hundreds of nonfiction articles and essays on subjects such as youth, mythology, environmentalism, human rights, gay and lesbian life, AIDS, mixed-race prejudice, American history, sports, wild animals, agriculture, and current events. Her short works have appeared in the Los Angeles Times, Reader's Digest, San Francisco Chronicle, Chicago Tribune, L.A. Woman, Mythosphere, Foreword and Persimmon Hill, as well as in LGBT publications such as the Advocate, Out, Gay & Lesbian Review, Genre, Philadelphia Gay News, and Lodestar Quarterly. As a columnist, Warren wrote a series about gay pioneers in sports history for Outsports.com and the "Left Field" series on the politics of AIDS and public health in A & U Magazine.

In addition to her literary work, Warren has been a committed human rights activist. Her personal activism started during the 1960s, with her efforts to have the American media recognize the individuality of Ukrainians and other ethnic groups in the USSR. In the 1970s, she became active in women's rights and was the plaintiffs' spokesperson for Susan Smith v. Reader's Digest, a landmark lawsuit that resulted in a class-action victory for women. As a former amateur athlete, she helped lead a group of female distance runners who forced the Amateur Athletics Union to change the discriminatory rules under which women were permitted to run in the mid-1970s.

Later, Warren's activism focused on free speech and issues confronting LGBT youth. In the late 1990s, she taught a GED program for LGBT youth, served on the Gay and Lesbian Education Commission of the Los Angeles Unified School District (LAUSD), and served on the LAUSD's Human Relations Education Commission. She is one of several dozen plaintiffs in ACLU v. Reno and ACLU v. Reno II, a case-setting lawsuit seeking to stem unwarranted censorship of the Internet. She was also one of the founders of Just Dissent, a California activist group seeking to protect the rights of peaceful protesters.

Warren's passionate activism has drawn her to diverse causes. She has volunteered for SOS Care, a wildcat rescue center, and wrote the script for their promotional video. In 2007, Warren campaigned for a seat on the West Hollywood City Council. Warren's literary and political work has been honored by the Arizona Human Rights Fund's Barry Goldwater Award, the National Cowboy Hall of Fame's Western Heritage Award, the Lambda Literary Award, the Saints & Sinners Hall of Fame, and the Gay and Lesbian Literary Hall of Fame.

Youth files Series 5_ 1989-2011*Scope and Contents

Class curriculum materials, art work and writings submitted by students, fliers, pamphlets, correspondence, meeting notes, yearbook editorial files, youth zines, applications, bylaws, administrative records, meeting minutes, articles, clippings, resumes, scholarship files, website printouts, and other records documenting Patricia Nell Warren's work with LGBT youth, 1989-2011. The series primarily documents her work with the EAGLES Center, a Los Angeles Unified School District program to serve at-risk LGBT students; the Los Angeles Unified School District's Gay and Lesbian Education Commission; Models of Pride, a conference for high school LGBT students; and YouthArts, an internet workshop for LGBT students. The records also document her involvement with Day Without Art, Gay, Lesbian and Straight networks, Life Youth Lobby Day, Project Yes, Project Youth Empowerment, Youth Writes, and Youth Fund, a scholarship fund for LGBT youth established by Warren. Note that some of the LGBT-youth research materials downloaded from the web during the mid-1990s were gathered while conducting research for Billy's Boy.

Arrangement

This series is arranged into six sections: 1) EAGLES, 2) Los Angeles Unified School District, 3) Miscellaneous, 4) Models of Pride, 5) Students and others, and 6) YouthArts.

EAGLES 1992-1995, 2002*Biographical/Historical note

In 1994, Warren became a volunteer teacher at the EAGLES Center, a Los Angeles Unified School District program to serve at-risk LGBT students. She taught classes in English-language communications and history for students who needed credits in those areas to graduate. Warren joined the school's council and became one of its representatives for LAUSD's LEARN program. Warren stopped teaching in 1995, but stayed on with the LAUSD as a commissioner of education.

While she was teaching, Warren also served as an advisor for the students publishing the EAGLES yearbook. The yearbook had no budget and was funded solely through teacher and volunteer support. Each student designed their own page, many with their own original artwork. The yearbook also provided record to the district's first gay and lesbian prom.

Los Angeles Unified School District 1994-2000*Biographical/Historical note

Warren belonged to the Gay and Lesbian Education Commission from 1996-1998. When the Los Angeles Board of Education terminated all the specialty commissions and replaced them with a single Human Relations Education Commission, Warren was appointed to the commission by board president Jeff Horton. Warren served on the Parliamentary Committee and helped write the bylaws and constitution. She resigned in 1999.

Biographical/Historical note

The YouthArts Project was an internet workshop that allowed LGBT students the opportunity to put their art works, photography, and writings online. The project emerged out of an EAGLES art class sponsored by the Los Angeles Museum of Contemporary Art. The class expanded to include to any interested LGBT student in the Los Angeles area, then through an Annenberg grant in 1995, moved to the University of Southern California campus under the guidance of librarian John Waiblinger. The students designed their own web pages, posted their creative works on the YouthArts website, and eventually created an e-zine. A YouthArts branch opened at the University of Pennsylvania under the guidance of Darin Weeks. Warren was an advisor to the project and oversaw the publishing activities on the website. Waiblinger attempted to create an internet center at the L.A. Gay & Lesbian Center to support the YouthArts project, but when this failed, the project eventually ceased operations.

Protester rights files Series 6_ 1956-2001*Scope and Contents

Email correspondence, online news stories, printouts of websites, articles, essays, online newsletters, clippings, press releases, electronic mailing list email, and other research documents, 1956-2001, compiled by Warren for her "Fourteen Dollars" column in A & U and for her work with the group Just Dissent.

Biographical/Historical note

Also known as the "Whistleblower Files," these files were first compiled by Warren for her "Fourteen Dollars" column in A & U. The column spotlighted the trend to the harsher treatment of protesters by law enforcement, especially for those opposing healthcare policies. California State Senator Richard Polanco's deputy Marie Armoudian picked up on the column, which led to Senator Polanco writing a bill with Senator Sheila Kuehl to minimize the penalties used against protesters. Those supporting the bill formed into a group called Just Dissent. They created the website www.justdissent.org and lobbied for its passage. Although the bill was passed by the state legislature, Governor Gray Davis vetoed the bill. See Pagans and Pilgrims in the Writing Series for more protester materials.

Biographical/Historical note

The Labhart Production Group was a Los Angeles-based production company that specialized in television and infomercial advertising. The group won many awards, including the Bronze Lion at the Cannes Film Festival. Philip Labhart worked with Warren to create an infomercial for Pat Quillen's SOS Care wildlife rescue organization, with Labhart producing and Warren writing the script. They also worked on creating a movie version of Warren's One Is the Sun, but it was never realized. Labhart died of AIDS-related lymphoma in 1993.
