Administrative history / Biographical sketch

Note

Red Jordan Arobateau (1943-2021) was an American author, poet, playwright, visual artist, and trans man.

Arobateau was born on November 15, 1943 in Chicago, Illinois. His father was Honduran and mother was African American. He began writing stories at the age of 13 as a form of self-expression, during what he has described as a turbulent childhood. During his adolescence, Arobateau began frequenting gay bars at a time when it was illegal to engage in same-sex relationships. In 1967, after briefly living in New York City, Arobateau moved to San Francisco.

In San Francisco, Arobateau wrote extensively. He began producing a large body of street lit, erotica, and autobiographical works. Arobateau had difficulties finding a publisher for his writing, and took to self-publishing, including hand-making and distributing his work in lesbian bars, women's bookstores, and on the street. He funded his writing mostly by working various jobs, including as a karate teacher, cashier, office clerk, and a housekeeper.

Over the years, Arobateau began to receive more attention in lesbian and feminist literary circles and his writing began to be picked up by small publishers. Additionally, his short stories and poetry have been included in anthologies such as, Out from Under: Sober Dykes & Our Friends (1978), True to Life Adventure Stories (1978), Daughters of Africa (1992), and Off the Rag: Lesbians Writing on Menopause (1996). He has also appeared in documentaries such as Before Stonewall (1984), Nobody's People: Portrait of a Christian Pornographer (1992), as well as Transgender Tuesdays: A Clinic in the Tenderloin (2012).

In 2019, Arobateau became the first person to move into the Marcy Adelman and Jeanette Gurevitch Community, an LGBTQ+ friendly senior housing initiative.

By the end of his life, Arobateau had produced over 60 paintings and 80 literary works.

Subseries: SC651-01-1.2 - Partial drafts, notes, and research

Title: Partial drafts, notes, and research

Reference code: SC651-01-1.2

Scope and content:

This sub-series consists of early draft material of Arobateau's books, poems, and plays. The draft material is comprised of handwritten notes and typed sections of writing with annotations. Most of the drafts are incomplete, and many pages contain only a few words or paragraphs. Sections of text have also been cut, rearranged, and refastened with tape or staples.

The draft files also contain material that was used as research or inspiration, such as newspaper clippings, flyers, magazines, and other collected ephemera.

Arrangement:

This sub-series represents the bulk of the fonds, and was received in a relatively unorganized state. Much of the material provided minimal identifying information or was loose in the box. For this reason, original order of this sub-series was maintained as much as possible to preserve any relation between materials. In some cases, prominent characters in the material, such as the Pigeon Fancier (PF), were noted in the file title or description to aid in searching for certain content.
